Constellations Challenge

As part of our science week, we are inviting children to have a go at inventing their own constellation. You will be given a piece of 'night sky' paper and some stars.

It would be wonderful if you could create your design with stars on the navy blue paper, adding your name and the name you have given to your constellation. On the white paper draw a picture of your object and write a description of it.

Inspiration for this challenge has come from Jacqueline Mitton's book of animal constellations, read to the children in assembly this week.

Please return your designs to school on Monday 15th December.
