

HEADMASTER'S WEEKLY NEWSLETTER

Dear Parents

The headline act this week has been the Year 4 production of Dragon Days, a performance which reminded those of us fortunate enough to watch the play last night of the huge enjoyment that children take from being part of drama performances, especially when they are able to 'tread the boards' in front of their parents. I look forward to the second performance tonight and seeing the high quality acting on display.

During the week, we have been very fortunate to call upon members of the parental body to come and talk to the children about a number of different topics. Mrs Button came and spoke to Year 2 about Islam, even reading parts of the Quran, while Dr Mishra gave a talk to Year 4 on breathlessness, explaining the research that she is involved with at the NNUH.

Elsewhere Mrs Coles and Mrs Smith have been supporting Reception to make a fabulous piece of artwork around bears and their habitat, with Mrs Coles also supporting Year 5 in the Art classes, offering some insightful ideas and thoughts regarding their work.

Mr Lawry, in his capacity as Head of Mathematics, started the NSPCC Number Day in Pre Prep with a wonderful assembly, including some 'magic' by allowing the children to think of a number between one and ten, and then through the use of a clever algorithm, managed to get them all to finish with the number 5.

In the Prep department, following a whole school quiz at the end of last term, some of the children were selected to represent the school this week in the SATIPS quiz, pitting their knowledge against many other schools. We look forward to seeing the results in due course.

Our sports teams have been busy at various IAPS tournaments over the course of this week for hockey, netball and cross country, with swimming taking its turn next week. Well done to all who have represented the school for the fine performances they have put in.

Wishing you all a wonderful weekend.
